Leaving a New Response to Sexual Violence

ANNUAL REPORT
2020

The Victim Rights Law Center’s mission is to provide legal representation to victims of rape and sexual assault to help rebuild their lives; and to promote a national movement committed to seeking justice for every rape and sexual assault victim.
Dear Friends,

We hope you and your families and colleagues are healthy and doing well! COVID-19 has certainly forced us all to pause and reflect. This has been such an intense year, it felt appropriate to look back and savor the victories while we re-center ourselves in preparation for the unpredictable year ahead.

Many organizations do wonderful work in their local communities. Others make their impact on the national landscape. What I refer to as our key to success is that we do both, and we do it well! We hope our annual report will give you a sense of our talented team and our compassionate efforts to help survivors during an especially challenging time when they have needed us the most.

Direct Services in Massachusetts and in Oregon

The VRLC’s anchor has always been that we are the first nonprofit law center in the country solely focused on the legal needs of sexual assault survivors. Through our representation of individual survivors, we help them stay in their jobs, homes, schools, and sometimes even in the country. Our attorneys are experts in sexual violence as well as multiple areas of civil law. Together, they creatively weave a safety net to help survivors rebuild their lives following sexual violence.

National Training and Mentorship

Our attorneys leverage what they learn from representing survivors to train and mentor other lawyers, advocates, medical professionals, campus administrators, and other professionals to help survivors in their own communities. It is critical that we share our skills and strategies to improve the response to sexual violence nationwide.

Bold Moves

We have a strong, smart team that makes bold moves. The VRLC filed two lawsuits against Department of Secretary Betsy DeVos to fight the harmful Title IX regulations. It was unnerving to sue the federal government (and one of our primary funding sources); but, for survivors, it was the right thing to do. We also host the only National Sexual Violence Law Conference. We do it on a shoestring! In 2018 it was in Charleston, SC and in 2019 it was in New Orleans, LA. Our 2020 conference was canceled due to the pandemic, but we are hoping to host one in 2022 at the latest. The logistics of planning a conference are demanding, but we feel passionate about creating a space to gather those special lawyers who are all fighting to end sexual violence.

Join Us

Fundraising during the pandemic is nerve-wracking and uncertain. As always, we have confidence that our community will lift us up as we stand by survivors. Thank you for attending our virtual events and for continuing to invest in the work of the VRLC! Please follow the VRLC on social media (@VictimRightsLaw), sign up for our newsletter, host an event, and donate. Let’s ensure the VRLC stays strong for survivors as we all weather this storm.

In gratitude,

Stacy Malone, Esq.

LEGAL HELP FOR SURVIVORS

Survivors of sexual assault often come to the VRLC seeking help with multiple legal issues. VRLC attorneys provide a wide range of expertise across several areas of law, so our clients can receive trauma-informed legal assistance for several different legal issues all in one place.

Massachusetts: As a result of the global pandemic, the VRLC’s offices physically closed in March of 2020. Attorneys immediately began to work remotely, continuing to represent survivors and providing them with information, legal advice, and representation in the areas of privacy, safety, housing, employment, education, immigration, and financial benefits. Our attorneys also represented clients telephonically and over Zoom in hearings where survivors were seeking protection orders. While calls to our intake line initially decreased during the beginning of the state shutdown, they quickly picked back up. VRLC staff attorneys and pro bono attorneys have been diligent about meeting the growing demand for legal assistance by survivors who are in jeopardy of losing their housing, jobs, immigration status, and whose privacy and safety may be compromised during the stress and unpredictability of the pandemic.

Oregon: Despite the many challenges of the pandemic and remote work, the VRLC’s office increased the number of survivors served by 16% and the number of matters with which we were able to provide assistance by 26%. Our top client needs were help with immigration matters; support and advocacy after reporting to law enforcement and throughout the criminal justice system; civil protection orders to keep themselves and their families safe; and help securing benefits and other forms of economic support. The Oregon direct services team continues to increase access to legal services for many of our region’s most marginalized and vulnerable survivors – many of whom would not have been able to secure the legal help they needed to get their lives back on track without assistance from the VRLC.

Massachusetts
- 857 individuals called the MA intake line.
- 647 survivors were assisted with 1,244 separate legal matters.
- 38% of clients identified as Black, Indigenous, and other People of Color.
- 24% identified as immigrants.
- 18% had limited English proficiency.
- 6% were experiencing homelessness.
- 21% disclosed a disability.
- 12% identified as LGBTQ.

Oregon
- 455 individuals called the OR intake line.
- 395 survivors were assisted with 719 separate legal matters.
- 73% of clients identified as Black, Indigenous, and other People of Color.
- 62% identified as immigrants.
- 32% had limited English proficiency.
- 9% were experiencing homelessness.
- 19% disclosed a disability.
- 18% identified as LGBTQ.
PRIVACY TRAINING AND RESOURCES

The VRLC’s national Privacy Rights Project training and technical assistance teams provided training and technical assistance (mentorship and support) to thousands of lawyers, community-based advocates, and other victim service providers to help them protect the confidentiality of survivors of sexual assault, dating and domestic violence, and stalking. We facilitated such webinars as “Privacy, Confidentiality, Privilege, and VAWA-Funded Providers: A Webinar for State and Tribal Leaders, Prosecutors, Advocates, Lawyers, and Health Care Providers;” “Protecting the Confidentiality of Survivors with Cognitive and Intellectual Disability” (with the Vera Institute); “Confidentiality and Coronavirus Contact Tracing;” and “Protecting Survivor Privacy While Working Remotely.” One of the resources we completed was our “Privacy on Campus: A Workbook for Advocates.”

Our privacy team’s work pivoted during the pandemic. As a result, we created the “Protecting Survivor Privacy When Working from Home” tips and “Confidentiality and Coronavirus Contact Tracing” FAQs, subsequently published in the national Sexual Assault Report.

SEXUAL ASSAULT JUSTICE EDUCATION

The Sexual Assault Justice Education Project’s training and technical assistance team provided 545 consultations, responses to individual information requests, and referrals to Office on Violence Against Women (OVW) grantees and others working on behalf of sexual assault survivors. We also delivered 12 online trainings attended by 982 victim service providers, including a webinar on the use of electronic evidence in sexual assault cases presented by 2016 Shining Star Awardee (pro bono attorney of the year) Kent Sinclair, Esq.; and another on defamation suits in the #MeToo era presented by VRLC Board of Directors Co-Chair (and 2008 Shining Star Awardee) Krista Green Pratt, Esq. Finally, we hosted a Share & Learn Conversation Series featuring interviews with expert guests on a variety of topics. Attorney Ryan Sullivan answered questions about bankruptcy and other forms of relief for sexual assault survivors; civil trial lawyer and ethics expert Erin Higgins (2009 Shining Star Awardee) addressed ethical considerations for OVW-funded legal services providers; and Leslye Orloff, Director of the National Immigrant Women’s Advocacy Project, discussed how COVID-19 and pandemic-specific benefits have impacted immigrant survivors of sexual assault.
New, harmful Title IX Regulations were released on May 6, 2020 and went into effect on August 14, 2020. This happened as the country was reeling from the imposition of lockdowns and facing a global pandemic that disrupted education, exacerbated volatile home circumstances, and interrupted ongoing campus disciplinary processes. Amid this volatility, the education team continued to zealously represent student survivors in a variety of contexts. In K-12, we navigated the Department of Education and Secondary Education’s Problem Resolution System, kept pace with the changing requirements for the delivery of special education programs and services, and ensured our students were supported and had access to appropriate services as youth mental health declined. We helped students obtain Individualized Education Programs, secured restraining orders for student survivors, and represented students navigating their schools’ Title IX and disciplinary processes.

In higher education, we fought for students to access information virtually, represented student survivors through complaint processes involving retaliatory countercomplaints, and advocated for fair processes to be implemented across the board. Thanks to the generosity of the McGillicuddy Charitable Trust, we developed the Victim Rights Law Center’s Tool for Incorporating Trauma-Informed Practices into the Final Title IX Rule Legal Framework for institutions to utilize in thinking through policy provisions with respect to the new regulatory framework. This tool encouraged institutions to use their discretion to build trauma-informed practices into their policy and procedures in response to complaints of sexual assault. We also recorded a series of mini-webinars on some of the changes under Title IX and its overlap with the Clery Act requirements for practitioners and institutions to better understand the legal landscape.

On June 10, 2020, the VRLC along with three organizational co-plaintiffs filed a lawsuit against then-Secretary of Education Betsy Devos and the Department of Education, challenging the new regulations and fighting to ensure survivors can safely access their education. That lawsuit is still pending. We continue to fight every day for our student survivor-clients.
PRO BONO PARTNERSHIPS

The pandemic changed our clients’ needs and changed how courts handled cases. Despite having to adjust our pro bono model to be responsive to the pandemic restrictions, pro bono attorneys were resilient and provided nearly 600 hours of pro bono work in Massachusetts and over 400 hours in Oregon in 2020. Our generous and dedicated pro bono lawyers assisted in representing clients, undertook legal research, and provided training and mentoring to VRLC staff in a variety of practice areas. Additionally, 30 new pro bono attorneys were trained, and we were able to launch our Pro Bono On Demand web-based portal for attorneys to access VRLC trainings online at their convenience.
